BEREA BELOVED

BY RAYMOND CABLE AND WILFRED JOHNSTON

Berea, Berea Beloved

Where friendships are formed fast and true,
And all men stand shoulder to shoulder
As brothers beneath White and Blue

CHORUS:

Thy mem'ry be enshrined in every heart
Thy spirit be of us a part;
And though we wander far away
Thy chimes will ring for us each day.
A flower nurtured by a plain
And watered by a mountain rain,
May you ever flourish there
O Berea! the beautiful, the fair.

When storms raged and danger was threat'ning,
And stout-hearted trembled with fear,
The spirit of heroes implanted
The roots in the wilderness drear.

Berea, Berea, we love thee;
We cherish the old and the new.
None ever can sever us from thee
We'll stand by the White and the Blue.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB

The Dramatic Club was one of the few organizations on the campus this year which was not affected by the curricular reorganization. The freshmen as well as many upper classmen applied for apprentice membership. Through their co-operation and the effort of master members who acted as student directors, the Tuesday night plays have been very successful both in locating talent and in teaching the fundamentals of play production.

The Club presented as its fall production Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing." Through the excellent work of the cast it was possible to present it as a finished production to the alumni at Homecoming. The play was under the student direction of Doris Widener and Virgil Powell. Elizabeth McFadden's "Double Door," under the student direction of Elizabeth Propps, was presented May, 14, 16, and 17. It proved to be unusually effective.

The Dramatic Club is sincerely grateful to Miss Eleanor Brooks, Dr. Harry B. Gough, and Dr. James W. Raine, who through their expert advice, their patience, and their cheerful service, have made invaluable contributions to the dramatic work of the year.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SPORTS

BASKETBALL

In view of the record made by the Mountaineers in the past few years, the 1937-38 season was disappointing in the number of games won. But beating their rival, Eastern, on Eastern's own floor, was almost enough to vindicate the Varsity hoopsters for anything that happened during the season. A small, smooth, fast-breaking, accurate-passing team, the quintet found it purely a case of having to "play over their heads" in every game with their tall sharp-shooting opponents. Though on the losing side the majority of the time, the Gunkler-men gave their opposition plenty of trouble. The defense was practically air-tight, and only by passing over the Varsity's head or shooting from the center of the floor was the competition able to score. Our forwards were constantly breaking into the opposing team's defense and literally running circles around them; but there always seemed to be a hand to block the ball before it reached the basket.

Well coached and conscious of the value of team work, the team had no one who tried to be the star of the hardwood. Plays were run and points were made in the spirit of team work. All in all, this team was the most congenial to be found on the Berea floor in many seasons.

The Mountaineers are lucky in that they lose only one man through graduation instead of three as was true last year. Coming up to vie for the position left by Captain Kelly Keith are several promising frosh. A squad that will be well matched as to ability should make interesting competition for berths on the team next year. With a year's experience of playing together and with the clever coaching of Coach Gunkler, the 1938-39 season should again find Berea in the top bracket.

CROSS COUNTRY

The team proved its prowess as "Mountaineers" by beating the University of Kentucky twice by the score of 26-29. The team was well-balanced, with Pilson, Clark, Ward and Scherrer all running the three miles within one-half minute of each other.

TRACK

Left standing in their holes at the start of the season by bowing to a powerful University of Kentucky team, the Gunkler men look forward to jumping the gun with all K.I.A.C. competition. Out-distancing Simpson of Kentucky in the javelin throw and jumping to a height of six feet to take first in both events and placing in others, Captain Roberts led the scoring for the Berea thinlies and gave other competitors a taste of what to expect when facing the Mountaineers. With the field events and the dashes brought up to the standard of the Berea distance runners, we have the best balanced team in many a cinder season, and another state championship is expected.

SWIMMING

With only two letter-men from the previous year the Varsity swimmers were unable to win a meet, although keen competition was given their opponents. Berea placed third in the state meet. This year's "B" swimmers are Begley, Brooks, Felton, Hillman and Phillis.

TENNIS

This year's team was somewhat weakened by the graduation of four outstanding net-men, but the experienced players of last year's squad plus several new men appear to be going strong. Starting off this season by losing to the University of Kentucky and winning from Eastern looks very much like a repetition of last year's season for the racquet slingers in winning the K.I.A.C. competition and losing to the teams that play a higher class of tennis.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

SPEEDBALL

The Upper Division blanketed the Lower Division in the annual Thanksgiving conflict by a score of 12-8. The game was fast and interesting but the Lower Division found their shin-kicking brothers too much for them.

DORMITORY BASKETBALL

Sixteen teams entered the field this year, each with the hope of ending up on top. First floor Howard realized this ambition by coming through the season undefeated, and by beating the third Howard south team in the tournament. Those picked from the various dormitory teams to make up the Pinnacle All-Star team were Bailey, Morrison, Wright, V. Powell, Huff, Cundiff, K. Mills, Farley, Moxley and J. Canida.

HANDBALL

Starting in a field of forty-eight, Brooks in the four wall tournament came through to defeat Lay in the finals and to claim the gold medal. Staging a come-back, Lay defeated Colvard in the consolation tournament to earn the silver medal and the title of runner-up in the tournament.

BASEBALL

With Collins and Brassfield as batteries, the Varsity went through the '37 season undefeated to gain the pennant from the Frosh.

This year Brassfield will remain behind the plate, and Ratliff will take the mound. Backed by an equally good team as in previous years, Varsity is again out for the banner.

DANCE

A Dance Drama Of Kentucky was first produced by the Department of Physical Education for Men in March, 1934. An attempt was made to show the close union between mind and body; that bodies may be "swift and enduring servants of the good will"; that the body may be used as a means of expression. It was also felt that there is a definite place for men in the dance, that there is a masculine grace of line and movement, and to men belong the great gestures of strength and endurance.

In receiving an invitation to present the dance at the National Convention of the American Health and Physical Education Association at Atlanta, Berea was recognized as making a unique contribution to Physical Education. A critical audience voiced enthusiastic approval of the performance.

THE MAY FESTIVAL

CREATIVE WRITING

Believing that the written expression of Berea students is a definite and important part of the life and work of Berea College, the class of 1938 is continuing the creative writing section instituted in The Chimes by last year's class. Although this section is small and cannot include all of the best writing done in Berea this year, it does represent a portion of Berea's written thought.

We wish to express our gratitude to John F. Smith for generously allowing us to use as an introduction to our creative writing section a poem which he had composed to Dr. Cowley, to whom we are dedicating this volume of The Chimes, and to Frank Long, our Berea artist, who has again contributed to our annual one of his significant woodcuts.

A MASTER OF HIS ART

To Doctor Robert H. Cowley

The master surgeon with a steady hand,
And heart that beats as true as Father Time,
Takes up the knife, and with a faith sublime
And skill which novice ne'er can understand
Begins his work. What ever may demand
Quick eye, prompt action, and a sense unerring
He meets with sober reasons that withstand
The strain that sets the timid hearts a-fearing.

He knows why hearts are hearts and breath is breath,
How hand and brain their wonders are achieving;
He sees how man may often vanquish death
And save a thousand loving hearts from grieving.
Spirits like this are sent to calm our fears
And take away the pain that drowns our joy in tears.

—John F. Smith

—By FRANK LONG

DOCTOR COWLEY'S CONTRIBUTION TO BEREА

The life of Bereа College can be studied through knowledge of the personalities that have entered into her building. Bereа has been blessed with great leaders. She has been especially fortunate in the man who has unselfishly given his skill, his strength, and his wisdom to the building up of the Health Department,—Doctor Robert Henry Cowley.

Dr. Cowley received his A.B. degree from Oberlin College in 1896. He had been an athlete there, and an outstanding student. In 1901 when he graduated from Western Reserve as a Doctor of Medicine, he was characterized as the most promising student they had ever had. After an internship in the City Hospital, Cleveland, and after his marriage to Miss Anna Parry of the Oberlin class of 1897, he began medical practice in his home town of Lorain, Ohio.

Two years later, in 1904, he was invited to become the college physician at Bereа. He came to the work at a time when it meant a great sacrifice. But he preferred the great opportunity of service offered him in Bereа to the wealth he could unquestionably have won in the private practice of medicine.

When Dr. Cowley arrived in Bereа, he at once undertook an immense and until then badly neglected work. There had been no "college" doctor, and such attention as the "town" doctor had been able to give the campus was inadequate. There was an old dwelling-house in use as a hospital, with a staff of a few student nurses and a head nurse. Beds often had to be put in the corridor as well as in the few rooms. There was no operating room; the office had to be emptied, scrubbed, and used for operations as they came. Water was not piped into the building. Epidemics raged, especially measles and typhoid. Dormitory living and class-room gatherings made contagion easy, and in those days students knew little of avoidance of it. Constant, but often seemingly fruitless education was a part of Dr. Cowley's task—to teach them to observe quarantine. He gave himself unstintingly to the work of single-handedly caring for students and faculty.

As new problems arose in his work, Dr. Cowley trained himself to meet them. A very short stay in Bereа made it clear that the examination and fitting of eyes was one of the great student needs. For this his training had not prepared him. First he spent a summer in study at Cleveland, and then a summer in an eye hospital in London. Later he made two trips to Vienna for study which gave him a skill in treatment of the nose, ear, and throat.

Dr. Cowley has watched the college develop through the years, and has taken great joy in the growth of his own department. From the early days with privations in equipment he has seen the changes through various stages of expansion up to a modern hospital with an adequate staff and a splendid Nurses Training School. It has been a long road with careful supervision, from the time when he came to the present. Then it was difficult simply to care for the sick. Now he is director of a modern well-equipped hospital approved by the American College of Surgeons and a member of the American Hospital Association.

In 1930 Oberlin College honored herself and him by conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Science in these words: "A Master, amid his mountains, of the art and science of medicine and of surgery, loved by his colleagues and his patients, always remembering the lofty traditions of his profession and religiously avoiding the many opportunities to commercialize his abilities, without the anticipation of reward he has given his full strength to the service of his fellow man."

Bereа has certainly been most fortunate in having at the head of her student health a man of Dr. Cowley's rare ability and training. His life here, his care of the faculty and students, his teaching, his direction of the hospital, and above all his inspiration have meant much to the college and to the community. Both as a surgeon and as a man he represents that which is highest and finest. We respect him, we honor him, we love him,—our own Doctor Cowley.

LYNCHING TREE

This is the tree
 in alabama.
This is the town
 in alabama.
This is the terrible hate
 in alabama.
That strung him to his fate.
That strung
And flung
 Him, dark and wretched,
 To eternity
 in alabama.
He died of hanging
 And a burning soul
 in alabama.

SATURATED INTIMACY

It is stimulating to be peeved at your roommate. You will exert yourself to do any number of things that would not occur to you ordinarily. You will remove any obligations you owe her in the way of stamps, soap, or money loans to make certain that the cause for irritation is wholly on one side, that you may be free to nurse your grievance righteously. Your side of the dresser and half of the top drawer will be meticulously arranged dating from the time of offense, and your desk will be a pointed contrast between your systematic habits and the sloth of your roommate.

Neither of you has mopped the floor in a week, but you attack the dunes of dust underneath your roommate's bed with vehement punches of silent indignation at her lack of co-operation.

In the evening when both of you are bolstered at the foot of your beds studying away in frigid, but conscious silence, you call, "Come," in warm, friendly tones reminiscent of your past intimacy with the fellow occupant of your room. You are much more attentive to the conversation of your visitor than is your usual self-centered custom. You feel secretly victorious when the intruder directs most of her chatter toward you.

It is most essential, you feel, to be the first to throw back the covers and jump up to switch on the light in the morning. Your roommate must not feel that you look to her to initiate the movement. You must be the first dressed and ready to go, because your roommate must realize that you are really independent of her, and if she should wish to be conciliating, that you are waiting for her.

AND DARKNESS COMES

Life beats through endless chains
Of tangled lives
And no one can tell
No one knows why
Red stains the sky and fades,
Love fades and dies.

No one understands
Why one man tastes of poison,
Dying with a sardonic twist to his lips;
While another injects into his body
Serum—poison too—that he may test
A remedy for but one disease
In the ceaseless pain of humanity.
Both die.
Further there is no knowledge.

No one can comprehend
Why there should be unfathomed hope
In a mother's eyes—a mother whose
Back is bent by too much labor, and too hard;
Why a young girl fights a losing fight
For ideals outworn in the flux of time
And grows more bitter.
Both live.

There is laughter in the world and tears;
Hears love, and still can hate,
And no one knows.
Hunger exists and brings in never ceasing train,
Endless want and despair over struggles,
And a weariness in asking why
To questions never settled.
Many go on being hungry.
Revolutions flare and are blanketed
Smotheringly.
Bitter want, with no chance to get, and do, and be.
Youth calls to youth: there is a way,
We are strong . . .
But today is gone flickering
With a last spattering of gold,
And darkness comes.

NO NEWS IS GOOD NEWS

The boy slides the morning paper under my door about the time of the ringing of the second chimes and the rumble of men leaving for breakfast. By the time breakfast is over, there is a concerted invasion of my room by about half the men on my floor. If I happen to be reading the paper, they resolutely appropriate it, section by section. They wrangle over the sports page and the best chair in the room. They growl about the inconvenience of having to come all the way to my room to read the news; they grumble about the "lousy sports editor," the scarcity of football pictures, baseball news, and inside dope; they comment disrespectfully on the dilute editorials and the weak puns of the columnists. They compute the comparative strength of different football, baseball, and basketball teams, hazard the opinion that Mussolini should be shot, and dispute everything, whether it be a statement that black is black, that T. A. Hendricks is Dean of Men, or that the Americans are in possession of Washington. They remind the late comers that it is extremely impolite to read over someone's shoulder, and that patience is one of the most admirable of virtues.

POSSESSION

When I see a distant rise of land, blue in the sun, I feel a sweep of pure exaltation that no mood or present annoyance can touch. This quickening of blood and heart-beat, this tingling of nerve fibers is like nothing else in my experience; like nothing else in all the world. I am as one transported and impervious to the common sights of men; as one who has come upon heaven through a secret way. I can think of no simile for the sight of purple distances rising fold on fold. There is nothing so full of the movement and the repose of life.

As I draw closer and enter the hill country, the individual trees qualitate the slopes, giving them the force of single identities. The balsam, pine, and hemlock smell unbelievably good. The air holds the piercing intoxicant that aged wines strive for. I grow more eager. The throb of possession is deep within me. There is the ancient spell of forests that is native to my Angle-Saxon blood. One lordly tree is grandeur and nobility. In array upon a hillside trees are a godlike race. The spirit of time, grown still and rich with potent yesterdays, abides among them. The meter of Virgil, the stately hexameter, bears out their rhythm.

All of this country belongs to the years that have slipped from me, to associations and companionships, some of which will have no earthly renewal. Every summer for seventeen years, and tall and spring for over twelve of them, I have come to the mountains. If memories of good times and of poignantly happy moments throng a place, love of it is natural though it be bare and ugly. If it has manifold beauty, swift shadows and everchanging brilliance of color, magnificent distance and palpable nearness, nothing can tear that place from the heart. I am assured that never on a mountain peak could I know utter despair. There I enjoy the greatest happiness which I am capable of receiving from nature. Hills lay wisdom and comfort and an expansion of spirit upon me in an inexplicable way. They have given me hours of rich solitudes and splendid flashes of perfect, untrammelled fellowship. Physical exultation and spiritual ecstasy sweep me; quiescent musing and passive observance rest me. Conflict of moods and out of them an inner peace—this is the cycle of my mountain-top experience.

If I speak in pompous, sentimental words they are the true expression of my feeling. The simple response of my spirit is complicated by translation into words. So much of my living and thinking is woven into the mountain scenes, so much of my nature is satisfied within them, that my ownership is certain. I stake no wooden posts, I hold no title deed, but irretrievably, irrefutably, the hills are mine.

SOME CHANGES IN MY ATTITUDES

"If you want to study some language, go to that country where it is spoken." How many times I have heard this! Yet I never expected that idea might be realized by me. Suddenly it happened that I came to America from Japan. Eighteen days' journey brought about a great difference in my position. Quite suddenly I had to change many customs which I was used to. Although I tried to adapt myself to the new circumstances, it was pretty hard. The greatest trouble was that I had to speak in English. Even though I knew some words very well and could spell them, these words were not understood when I pronounced them. Some words, although I knew them by spelling, sounded quite new when someone talked to me. The inconvenience in the unfamiliar language made me very retiring in speaking. When someone said something, I would answer simply, "Yes," or "No," with much hesitation. Many times my English was not understood. Yet I was too bashful to repeat. One day a friend of mine said, "Did you see my pictures?" putting her pictures on her desk. I was very eager to look at them, and I answered, "Yes." I waited and waited, expecting that she might bring them to me soon. But she put them back into the drawer of her desk, and she looked grave. In a moment we were in a strange air. It was natural. I should have answered, "No"; yet I said just, "Yes," omitting, "I should like to see them." Besides, I did not say anything to make the misunderstood word clear. Now I would explain the source of the mistake in such a case. In that moment my friend would understand clearly why I said yes instead of no. Then, there would be merry laughter.

When I ate at table, other boys and girls talked and laughed merrily; yet, I never said anything except, "Thank you," or "No thank you," because we in my country do not talk much at table. We never use our fingers. Always casting sheep's eyes at others, I imitated them. But when a plate of pickles was passed around, with a little hesitation and slowly I moved some of them to my plate. Sometimes I held the glass of water with both hands quite unconsciously. While others were enjoying the dishes, without a word I managed the unfamiliar fork and knife, casting down my eyes. Often we had apples at a meal. Without eating at table, boys and girls would leave the dining room holding the apples in their hands, and they would bite them, out on the way to their dormitories. When I was going back to my dormitory from the dining room with some friends, one of them said, "Why don't you eat?" Instead of answering, I simply smiled. And still I was holding the apple in my hand, suppressing the appetite stimulated by her words. Really, I could not do it; I felt as if someone was looking at me, and soon I might be forced to go to the teacher's room to have a long lecture and to be told not to do such a thing again. In such a way I led a quite solitary existence which never could fuse into that of other students. But later the students' manners and customs became quite natural to me.

There was another custom which I could not change easily. In Japan we would bow our heads to show our respect for others. We had to make a deep bow to our teachers or superiors wheresoever we met them on a street or at the gallery of our school. This habit for a long time often let me bow my head unconsciously. But instead of making a low bow, boys and girls just said, "Hello!" to each other; this greeting was accepted even between teachers and students. At first, when a teacher said to me, "Hello," I hesitated to answer, wondering whether I could say the same thing or not. It seemed too friendly to say to teachers. But soon I could understand that it was really the symbol of democratic spirit and individual respect. Now it is the best word I love among the common words. Hello! How warm and familiar it is!

Thus, my attitude of hesitation disappeared soon; really adaptation is one of the privileges which we are given by nature. And now I feel as if I am one of the American students, as if my face is white and my hair is curled. Although I may look still a stranger, I am enjoying the school life as well as other girls. Keenly I feel my joy that I am studying with cheerful students in the very country where Liberty is respected above all.

ARGUMENT IN AUTUMN

When summer ends, we say the rose will fade,
When autumn comes, we think the heart will die;
The rose must yield to winter's ambushade,
The heart will answer Adam's painful lie.

Yet will the rose-haw punctuate the scene,
A master hand will paint the winter tree—
Is ripened corn less lovely than the green?
Are oaks with leaves of ice not fair to see?

—James Prince

MYRIAD LEAVES

With surging power earth shouts life to tree:
From trunk to limb, and limb to leaf the strength
Runs pulsing high, each leaf athrob and free,
Yet nourished by the roots at friendly length.
And teeming, myriad leaves make up the tree,
For through them life, a strength unebbing, flows,
Each leaf one microscopic part to be
Of the inclusive whole which all compose.
As leaf from tree, so issues man from God—
Minute outgrowth of giant-giving source;
Begetter, nourisher, embracer—God,
And man partakes of His abundant force.
A midge is man in timeless spans of His,
Yet part of the vast source of all that is!

—Raymond Padgett

WIND

In the pale moonlight the wind worries the tired, dead leaves across the valley.
Then it hunts on the dark, wooded hillside and hustles more listless leaves back to be pressed against the old creek bank.
Then it rushes at them and scatters them and bullies them.
The tired leaves are sick of hurry
But the wind is tireless.

—Carlton Miller

BLACK GOLD

Black gold—
Merciless murderer of men!
Wop, Hunk, Dago—all bow
To your relentless grasp.
Sweating, cursing, groaning with fatigue
They toil ceaselessly to wrench you from your
Aged bed—bed of a million years.
Why do they labor?
You are a God!

You feed the hungry flames of the giant liner;
A white coated grocer markets you
From his neatly-stocked shelves.
A straining locomotive plows through the murky night;
Behind the fiery monster
Empty gondolas clatter and sway over ribbons of steel.
From forges white hot with coal come cannon
Feeding passions of hate and greed in some russet brown Autumn.
A little old lady sits by her fire and knits contentedly.
In roadhouse and ballroom couples glide;
Girls in gowns of beautiful violets, blues and yellows—
Colors wrested from the grimy, glistening blackness
Of a lump of coal.

A deserted coal camp squats in the barren valley.
Weeds—and worms—claim shanties
Where once was Life—
And Death.

—Robert McCutcheon

FOG

The dank fog clung to the buildings, the trees and the ground. Pushing through the fog, the nearer buildings stood out against it. They seemed to stand alone; shadows and vague shapes blended into the mist behind them. The wet limbs of trees that had not yet felt spring in their veins were black against the grayness. From my window, the houses I could see all seemed to have gone inside, to have turned their backs. They looked withdrawn and inhospitable. The dreariness was emphasized by a half-hearted chirp from a too-early bird. On a tree in front of the window, a few brown leaves fluttered dispiritedly.

Everything was muffled, waiting for the fog to lift. Everything was melancholy, sad, and weeping—everything except the cars that went on, their horns honking blatantly, unconscious of the fog. Their tires made a wet sound on the pavement—rubber against the streets. The chilling, rain-soaked air was the kind that penetrated the thin skin of mortals and sank down to their bones, making them shiver in their coats. But the machines ignored it. They looked like gray wraiths, but you knew they were real. The fog could not reach them.

SONNETS OF HOME

I

Give me back the mountain life I know—
The life which I have lived and learned to love,
The narrow streams with ragged hills above—
Those hills of stone and trees whence raw winds blow
Across the earth with stinging sleet and snow.
Where strong men—poor men—made of common clay
Are born to toil and die their simple way—
They spring from clay and back to clay they go.
One sometimes sees small weather-beaten shacks
With clapboard roofs and clay chinked in the cracks,
Where people live their lives of pleasant toil,
And every man is equal to the rest.
All are one class—There is no worst or best—
Where common people hold the rugged soil.

II

I long to go back home—back to the clay.
I want to roam the hills at night alone,
And hold the handles of a plow all day;
To hear its steel point scraping past a stone,
And feel the loose soil give beneath my feet.
I want to seine the silent fish at night,
To wade the river warmed by summer heat,
And watch the waves reflecting white moonlight.
I want to walk beneath the apple trees,
And smell their balmy blossoms in the spring;
To hear the humming rhythm of the bees,
And listen to the songs the catbirds sing.
I long to be back home—away from strife,
Relax again with things that make up life.

III

Then let me face a rainstorm on a hill
And strip my sun-tanned body to the waist,
To feel the rain-sheets fall upon my face
And blow across my body at their will.
Give me saw-toothed lightning and black clouds,
A thunder-rocking earth beneath my feet,
Pure winds to bow me down as trees are bowed,
And torrents of white rain that blow and beat—
That make me free as any winds that blow,
As reckless as a plunging mountain creek,
As strong as knotty grape vines ever grow,
While I stand there upon some lonely peak
Among tall trees and limestone rough and crude
With Nature speaking in her wildest mood.

IV

Yes, give me back the wind and moon and stars,
And let me shell corn for the calves once more
In the big corn crib with the chestnut door,
And milk the cows again out at the bars.
I long to sit on the old white oak sled
And hear the twilight winds blow soft and cool,
The cattle tramping cornstalks in the shed,
The restless stamping of a grazing mule,
The shuffling of young pigs in their leaf bed,
The drone of insects, and the bleat of sheep.
These are the memories that are in my head;
These are the thoughts I think before I sleep.
Some day back to this life for which I yearn
Like migratory birds I shall return.

PRESBYTERIAN BREAD

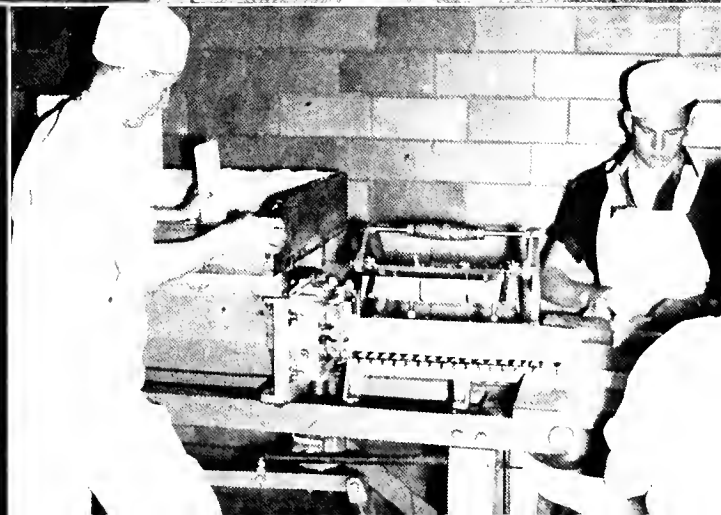

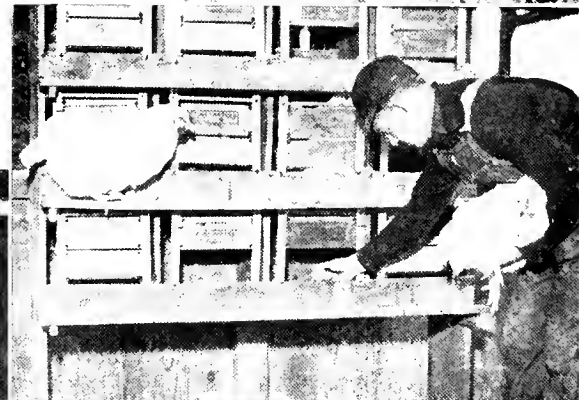

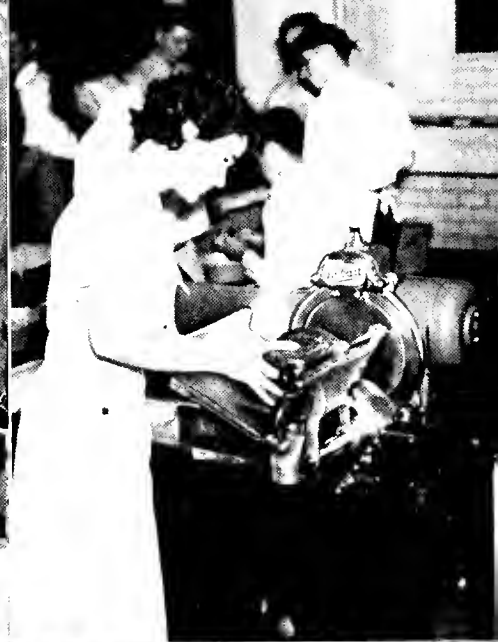

At night as I walk home from work, a tantalizing blast of bread smells comes out of the little round ventilating window of the bakery at 6th and Columbia. Sometimes these smells cause my mind to go back to the Kentucky Mountains of my childhood, where there were no bakeries nor delicatessans, but where we nevertheless had breads of such peculiar kinds and of such toothsome flavors that we really had no need for these folderols of the “furrin” country.

In those days cornbread was what we understood to be meant when one said, “Bread is the staff of life.” That we had with us always. If by some devious process we became possessors of some wheat flour, it was looked upon as a luxury not to be partaken of lightly but to be saved and made into biscuits for our peculiar help-one-another “workings” or for the rare visit of some itinerant Hardshell preacher.

Loaf-bread as such was unknown to us, much less the art of making it. We had been cut off from our fellows too long to remember that. Never to our knowledge had we eaten any. But once, in that long past day, a group of us were invited to have a community picnic dinner with our friends, the missionary women, who were so valiantly interested in the advancement of our well-being. We packed our split-oak baskets with corn-bread and biscuits. But for their share of the dinner that day these “furrin” women had some of the strangest looking bread; it tasted both sweetish and soured-ish, but it was good, and the slices of pork between were familiar. Our good manners overcame our curiosity, so we did not ask what it was. Since the kind ladies were workers for the Presbyterian Church, some of our number thought the bread might be peculiar to that faith; therefore we gave it the name “Presbyterian Bread.”

Every once in a while I go into the bakery at 6th and Columbia for bread, and I smile as I wonder what the sawed-off, pinkly bald baker would say if I should ask him for a loaf of ‘Presbyterian Bread.’

LABOR

LABOR AND LEARNING

"Everyone works in Berea," campus guides tell interested guests of the college, students tell their friends, and newspapers tell the nation. How democratic that sounds. How democratic it is!

When Berea College was founded in 1855, the constitution stated, "Its object shall be to furnish the opportunity for a thorough education to all persons of good moral character at the least possible expense. To secure this end all possible facilities and inducements for manual labor shall be offered to its students." This was an endeavor to find a method of taking higher education to the common people.

Berea has continued to furnish this type of education throughout her eighty-three years. The results have justified her in doing so. She has been able to meet the test of survival where competition has been terrific, and where most religious, non-sectarian, privately controlled colleges have succumbed. It is the judgement of many that had Berea deserted her labor ideal she could not have secured the moral and financial support which has made her continued existence possible. The unique intellectual, cultural, and moral training associated with the student labor system has aroused widespread interest in Berea College and in her graduates who have gone out to secure jobs.

Our college has been able to continue and enlarge this policy because she has definitely and consistently made student labor one of her fundamental principles. It has been her glory and her crown. Each president has taken his stand on this fundamental principle and has, in the words of President Hutchins, pledged himself to "keep open the path from the cabin to the college," by carrying out the promise in Berea's present constitution to provide "opportunities for manual labor as assistance in self-support."

The student labor program has bridged the gap between work and school. Interesting work, plain living, and high thinking has proved of value to all students. The boys and girls coming to Berea do not come to get away from life and its work, but to continue living and working on a higher level. There is less break with normal living here than at the average college. Everyone works. And by this ideal, Berea has been able to give a standard college education to the underprivileged, and has made it possible for her young men and young women to enter the highest graduate and professional schools on a par with the students from other colleges.

Labor in the school program encourages the early planning of a life program. Berea believes that if we grant that work of some sort is necessary in every age of one's life, the labor done in school should not only help in self-support while in school, but should be an integral part of a continuous work program. Most often when a student comes to Berea he has already learned of the variety of tasks to be done and rarely comes without having some preference. Probably for the first time in his life he has had to consider what work he should choose to do. This is the natural way to approach the problem of vocational guidance. He does not have to wait until he is forced out into the cold world to make a living, but faces the practical problems in an institution organized to guide him in a friendly and helpful way. He has a chance to see and explore a great variety of the world's tasks in actual operation as essential parts of a community. He must hunt his job and get experience in interviewing employers. He then is engaged in making a product or rendering a service which will be put to the test of use by his fellow students. He must make good on the job or else lose it and be compelled to get another. His whole vocational experience is real and at the same time under the most favorable circumstances of friendly, not commercial guidance.

Berea's labor system has been increasingly successful throughout the years. Not only has it made possible an inexpensive education, but it has also combined with the high calibre of learning a significant course in the value and dignity of labor.

May we add the words of Henry Van Dyke:

"This is the gospel of Labor,
Ring in, ye bells of the Kirk.
The Lord of Love
Came down from above,
To live with the men who work."

FOREWORD

This year makes a notable change in the system of organization on our campus. There has been a shifting of classes with the result of an Upper Division made up of the College sophomores, juniors, and seniors, and a Lower Division made up of the former Academy juniors and seniors and the College freshmen.

This plan, however, is not as new as its institution. It has been in the minds of President Hutchins and some of the members of the faculty for several years. Eight years ago the idea of a Junior College set-up was discussed, but no definite plans were made. Two years later, President Hutchins called a conference of the deans. Several plans of organization were considered, and the present set-up of the two Divisions was termed best for our Berea system.

This year the plan has been partially instituted. Next year, the College sophomore class will be included in the Lower Division; this will complete the plan for an Upper Division made up of two classes and a Lower Division of four classes. Our school system is no longer made up of College, Academy, and Foundation-Junior High; we are now known as the Upper and Lower Divisions of Berea College, and the Foundation-Junior High School.

"THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH"

There was a flash of evolutionary thought across the remote senses of a genius. It was caught in the inescapable clutch of man's ever-present desire to progress. Then came a whole torrent of flashes. This time they were reflected from the single mind of one thinker to the photographic minds of a group of thinkers. The result: the beginning of a new era of organization on the Berea College campus.

A change is taking place, or has taken place. Its coming has been like opening a door and letting a bright stream of sunlight fall into an already well-lighted room. The actual newness of the system in Kentucky makes it a pioneering enterprise. It is good to know that our beloved Berea is a forerunner in educational methods. While "Old Man Time" continues on his listless way, Berea continues to expand. The pioneer must go before the permanent homesteader. Certainly, then, it is he who is greater!

We bid "good-bye" to our dear old Academy. There is at first thought a tinge of regret; but it is quickly replaced by the pleasant anticipation of a better Lower Division for the Berea students of tomorrow.

We, the Class of '38
Who now face the lanes of fame and fate,
Send out to those of future years
A hearty good wish and a million cheers.

Often have we been asked the question, "What department are you in?" Promptly we have replied, "Academy," "Junior-High," or "College." But now we will answer with the new names, "Upper Division" and "Lower Division." We loved our Academy, but we stand in welcome to the Lower Division.

As we think of the change which is taking place, we turn our eyes at once to the one who has so faithfully served the Academy for many years. The services rendered by Dean C. N. Shutt cannot be too highly praised. And so, the Senior Class of this school year welcomes this opportunity to express its humble thanks to him. We sincerely wish for our Academy Dean his continued success as Dean of the Lower Division.

"The old order changeth, giving place to the new." How much romance in these few words! How much force! They tend to make people think forwardly and progressively. We cannot always be certain that the new order will prove superior to its precedent. But history has proved that if we are to progress the old order cannot stand.

Therefore, in behalf of the entire graduating class of 1938, may these words salute the future of the new organization. May a better Berea continue to contribute to the good of the world.

ATHLETICS

PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND ATHLETICS

The glory of Berea's physical education program is its adaptation to the needs of the great majority of students. The individual receives the attention which is most likely to produce the greatest bodily and mental efficiency, while groups are adequately stimulated and inspired toward the development of team play. Even in the comparatively restricted field of competitive sports the emphasis is upon widespread participation more than upon individual specialization.

WOMEN'S SPORTS

The Lower Division women have had an important share in the institutional athletics. Their sports have included field hockey, archery, baseball, basketball, swimming, hiking, tennis, and track and field events. Detailed mention is omitted but a general estimation of interest on the part of the girls can be obtained by noticing the number of athletic letters on the campus.

MEN'S SPORTS—Fall and Winter

In the first part of the school year formal sports received little attention. Activities in basketball began early, both the Freshman and Secondary squads keeping company with the Varsity. As far as the number of games won and lost is concerned, each aggregation had only a passable season. The Academy, after winning from many opponents of the district during the regular season, lost in the first game of the tournament. Both teams, however, showed a spirit of determination that made their supporters proud. In the ten-team intramural series the School honors were won by the squad representing Marshall House and the non-dormitory group, closely pressed, however, by the third-floor Hunting tribe.

In swimming, although they were forced to bow to the Varsity, both classifications had competent teams, the Academy finishing second in the inter-school meet.

Spring Sports

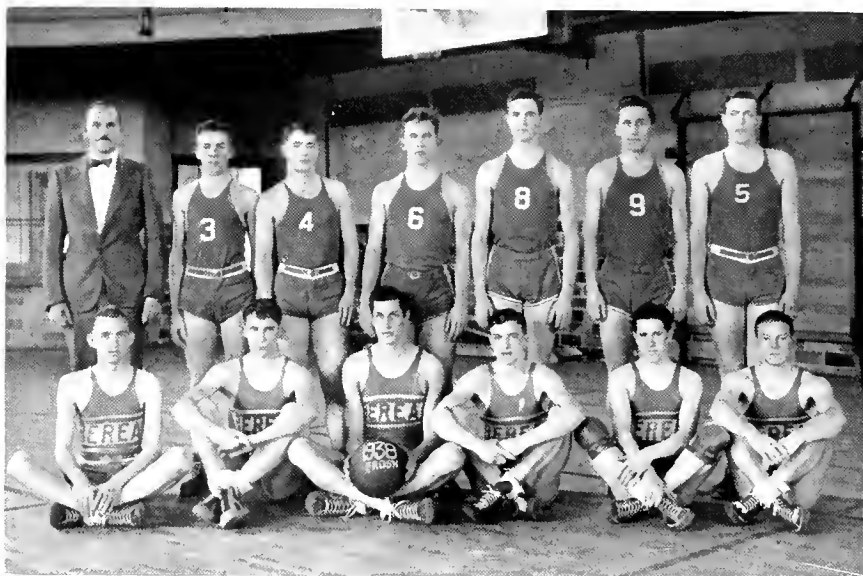

As the season opens, interest in tennis, baseball, and track is considerable. About forty men have reported as candidates for the teams in each of these sports. In the inter-school baseball series no forecast can be ventured, for anything may happen. The Frosh appear to have a particularly good chance. In tennis and track both groups are working hard. So far their competition has been limited to the campus, but meets with teams from other institutions have been scheduled for both the Freshmen and the Academy. Some interest has also been shown in the possibility of a softball schedule.

Through these activities over two hundred Lower Division men, from a total of approximately three hundred, have participated in organized competitive sports during the year.

Best in the long run!

As authorized distributor for Williams Ice-O-Matic I am naturally proud of the fine record that has been established by Ice-O-Matic Installations in Berea College. I am equally proud of the manufacturing methods that make it possible for Ice-O-Matic to furnish equally satisfactory and dependable performance for every cooling need.

There is a reason for Ice-O-Matic's long life and carefree performance. Both are the result of high quality materials, fashioned by precision methods into the smooth-running, sturdy Ice-O-Matic compressor. Ice-O-Matic is available in sizes and capacities for all cooling needs. Either electric motor or gasoline engine driven.
